

Sorry J.Lo There's a New Booty in Town

8.3.11

Britain's Pippa Middleton has sparked American's interest ever since she appeared in a form-fitting Alexander McQueen gown as maid of honor to big sister Catherine – now the Duchess of Cambridge – at her wedding to Prince William in April. She's splashed across the tabloids every week and even gotten offers to strip down for Vivid Entertainment, but pics of Pippa's rump have been seen in another venue lately...plastic surgeons' offices.

It was that back view of Middleton carefully carrying her older sister's nine-foot long train into the church that captivated plastic surgery lovers. The latest craze here in the U.S. and across the pond is to get the 'Pippa Butt Lift'. Once the full, booty-licious derrieres a la Beyonce and J.Lo reigned supreme, now it's small, shapely and perky backside that are considered the best asset. While it was once trendy to boost a booty to mimic Kim Kardashian, more athletic, round and perky butts like Pippa and Jessica Biel are making the top request lists from patients at plastic surgery offices across the country.

"These days, it's all about less is more," says Dr. Semira Bayati, a cosmetic surgeon in Newport Beach California. "From smaller derrieres to breast reductions, many of my patients are requesting more natural plastic surgery looks. Good plastic surgery is suppose to enhance your beauty, not like you shopped for parts."

Ahem, Heidi Montag and Pam Anderson...did you hear that?